Information:

MOULD KING 14016S DOUBLE BARREL SHOT TOY BUILDING TOY is an extensive building block model inspired by a double-barrel shotgun, created from 1054 pieces. The brown-and-black colour scheme and long, slender shape give it an impressive military character, ideal for display on a shelf or desk. The set offers many technical details and a visible mechanism, making the building process engaging and satisfying. It is a proposition for collectors and fans of themed constructions who are looking for a model that stands out for its appearance, precision of workmanship and decorative potential.

Full product description

Double-barrel model made of bricks

MOULD KING 14016S DOUBLE BARREL SHOT TOY BUILDING TOY is an extensive construction set for people who like models with a military style, technical details and projects designed for an impressive display. The brown-and-black colour scheme gives the build a classic, understated look, and the long shape of the model looks great on a shelf, desk or in a themed collection. It is an option for brick fans looking for a set that is more distinctive than standard vehicles or buildings.

1,054 building pieces

The set consists of 1,054 pieces, allowing you to create a model with a clear form and numerous construction details. As you assemble it, successive sections of the body, the long front section, the grip area and additional elements visible on the finished model take shape. This number of bricks means the build requires focus and patience, while also giving the satisfaction of watching individual parts come together into a coherent structure with a recognisable shape.

Technical details of the model

The brick shotgun model stands out with its visible mechanism and elements that give it a more technical character. A close-up shows that the build is not based solely on a simple form, but includes solutions that increase its appeal both when viewing and assembling it. As a result, the model may interest people who like to analyse how the parts are connected, the layout of the individual sections and the details hidden in the central part of the build.

For collection and display

Once assembled, the Mould King double-barrel model works well as part of a collection inspired by military themes, history or technical brick constructions. The dark arrangement, brown accents and additional elements visible next to the model emphasise its display character. It is a set for people looking for a specific theme, a striking appearance and a build that, once completed, can serve as a themed decoration.
