Full product description

Chrysanthemum made of bricks in warm autumn colours

MOULD KING 24118 is a construction set depicting a chrysanthemum placed in a decorative pot. Orange and yellow flowers create a striking composition, complemented by dark green stems and spreading leaves. The whole piece is set in a red pot with a gold accent and a brown base, making the model look great on a table, shelf or chest of drawers. It is an option that combines the pleasure of building with the possibility of creating a lasting interior decoration.

Decoration that brings home spaces to life

The finished model can become an interesting element in the arrangement of a living room, bedroom, study or home library. The intense colours of the flowers attract attention, while the slim form of the composition means the set does not require much display space. The brick chrysanthemum suits both bright, natural interiors and spaces decorated in a more vivid colour palette. It does not require watering or any additional care, so it retains its decorative character at all times.

Detailed flowers full of construction features

The most distinctive element of the set is the multi-layered flower heads made from small, curved pieces. The combination of yellow and orange elements helps recreate the varied shapes of the petals and gives the composition a three-dimensional look. The individual flowers are positioned at different heights, making the whole piece resemble a naturally growing plant. Building these details lets you observe how an impressive, recognisable chrysanthemum form gradually emerges from small parts.

Decorative pot as part of the structure

The model includes not only the flowers, but also an elaborate pot assembled from bricks. Its burgundy-red colour is broken up by a gold band, while the brown base gives the structure a stable and decorative appearance. Green leaves arranged around the stems gently extend beyond the outline of the pot, creating a smooth transition between the base and the upper part of the plant. As a result, all the elements of the set form one coherent composition intended for display.

An idea for a decorative gift

The MOULD KING 24118 set may appeal to lovers of flowers, construction models and unusual decorations. The assembly process is an engaging activity, and the completed composition can be placed in a visible spot as the result of the work done. The chrysanthemum motif and warm colour palette make the model fit well into autumn arrangements, but it can be displayed all year round. It is also an interesting gift idea for someone who enjoys creating decorative items themselves.

417 pieces and a satisfying building process

The set consists of 417 pieces that form the flower heads, buds, stems, leaves, pot and decorative base. This number of parts allows more elaborate construction stages to be combined with work on small details. Building helps develop concentration, patience and the ability to follow successive assembly steps. Once completed, it becomes a full potted plant that can be used straight away as part of the décor.

Slim model with a height of 22.8 cm

Once assembled, the composition reaches a height of 22.8 cm, making it clearly visible while still easy to place on furniture and shelves. The vertical form highlights the different levels of the flowers, from the small buds to the most elaborate upper flower head. The pot with a wide base provides proper support for the whole structure during display. The model can be presented on its own or combined with other plants and flowers made of bricks.
