Measuring oxygen levels and monitoring heart rate

If the patient is agitated and short of breath, blood oxygen levels (SpO2) may be low. Measure oxygen levels with TruSeen 4.5 technology, which measures the wavelength of light and recognizes oxygen molecules in the blood, even at low ambient temperatures and high altitudes. Innovative Maimo technology measures the wearer's heart rate using an LED sensor and photodiodes. The glass captures light, saves battery power and is comfortable to wear. Innovative algorithms provide more accurate heart rate tracking.
